Introduction

The Resources and Engineering Skills Alliance (RESA) is a not-for-profit, industry lead skills and workforce advisory agency established in 2007 to support the mineral resources sector in South Australia.

RESA is the primary skills and workforce development advisory agency for the mining and energy industry sectors -providing state representation in national forums and connecting with the best of Australian practice for the benefit of South Australians.

RESA is focussed on providing services that support government and industry to meet the workforce and organisational capability requirements of the mining and METS sectors.

RESA's three priority areas of focus are Skills and Workforce, Regional Capability and Aboriginal Economic Participation.

Our approach is to:

- consult widely to understand sector priorities and challenges
- collate the industry priorities information and data we receive and report it through channels that have the capability to develop, support or provide solutions
- recognise the capability throughout the Australian and South Australian industry sector and to
- initiate and support collaboration as required to deliver solutions to industry
- develop recommendations for programs, services and strategic solutions where there are gaps in existing capability
- deliver programs, services and strategic solutions through targeted projects supported by industry and / or government.

The mineral resource and energy sectors skills and workforce priorities are supported by a complex and diverse ecosystem of government, industry and other stakeholders. RESA navigates this complex ecosystem to facilitate connection, advocate and identify opportunities to address industry priorities.

The components of the ecosystem identified in this report does not represent the sector in it's entirety and is subject to change.
